J. Blythe of sentative of the Chieftain today and in substance said:

"My interest in the case is simply that of a lawyer; the attorney general of the United States. (Harmon) in an opinion declared against the liability of the govern ment to pay the amount found due the Cherokee nation under the strip agreement. It is the intention of the attorneys employed by Caref Buffington, including myself, to simply go into the courts, the court of claims first, and thence to the supreme court of the United States and ask for a judgement for the amount of the award. It is a mistake that something over one million of this award is available. The attorney general declared that it had all been setnot owe the Cherokees any ofit."
